ALCORSO ARTS AND NATURE FUND

Creatively inspiring nature conservation

The Alcorso Foundation was established in 2001 to honour the late Claudio Alcorso. For sixteen years, the Alcorso Foundation continued Claudio and Lesley Alcorso's legacy by enabling individuals and organisations to make a positive difference to the social and cultural fabric of Tasmania through social justice, the arts and the environment.

In 2017, the Alcorso Foundation is winding down, however a designated Alcorso Arts and Nature Fund has been established through the Tasmanian Land Conservancy (TLC) Foundation.

The TLC Foundation is an endowment fund, established to secure the independent, long-term resourcing required to ensure the effective and ongoing management of the TLC's 18 permanent reserves.

From the remote mountain tops to coastal environments, woodlands, wetlands and grasslands, these reserves protect some of the most important natural areas in Tasmania. They conserve critical habitat for rare and threatened species and serve as safe havens for the future.

While acquiring and protecting land is critically important, effective long-term management of these areas is fundamental to ensure they remain safeguarded for future generations. To achieve this, the capital of the TLC Foundation (including the Alcorso Arts and Nature Fund) is invested through a rigorous environmental and ethical screen. The funds generated then provide the TLC with a permanent, reliable and vital source of income for our reserves, forever.

HOW IT WORKS

The TLC Foundation is made up of various individual Funds, including the Alcorso Arts and Nature Fund. Each Fund within the Foundation provides an endowment for perpetual support, with annual interest generated by the gift directly funding the management of our reserves. In the case of the Alcorso Arts and Nature Fund, interest will be invested in initiatives that creatively inspire nature conservation.

Alcorso Arts and Nature Fund enables Claudio and Lesley's vision to continue, benefiting nature and the arts in Tasmania.

Your gift to the TLC Foundation through the Alcorso Arts and Nature Fund will creatively inspire nature conservation in Tasmania, in perpetuity.
